27) Addenda et corrigenda to "Studies in Eblaite Prosopography:" the dumu-nita en — The documents of the Great Archive L.2769 contain repeated references to the sons of the Eblaite kings (dumu-nita en) listed in groups: in most cases they are mentioned as the recipients of various goods delivered on particular occasions, such as the wedding between Tabūr-damu and Yiṯġar-damu ([75.1730 = M 7 34] and [75.2417], see Biga and Capomacchia 2012). Several lists of royal sons have been identified and collected by Alfonso Archi, Maria Giovanna Biga, and Lucio Milano (1988) as part of their detailed study on the members of the kings' and viziers' families at Ebla. Only recently newly published documents with hitherto unknown data have taken our understanding of kin relationships at the court of Palace G to a new level. In this note I intend to revise and update the data published in Archi, Biga, and Milano (1988, 222-232) concerning the dumu-nita en.

Royal sons: Individual mentions

Daggers (†) indicate corrections with respect to the 1988 publication. New evidence suggests that individuals marked with an asterisk (*) might not belong to the group of royal sons. A superscript plus sign (+) marks new PNs not included in Archi, Biga, and Milano (1988). The abbreviation EST (Ebla Scattered Texts) refers to the digital edition of the tablets published on the EbDA database (Milano and Maiocchi 2011–).

I-mu-da-mu: [75.1373 = M II 47] is a document concerning silver incomes (mu-ku$_x$) dated to royal daughter Dar-kab-du-lum's departure for Kakmium (see also [75.1371+75.1372 = M 2 45] rev.I:5-II:3). Pettinato (1980) could not read the three signs following I-mu-da-mu's name (rev.I:3): see however Archi (2000, 26) where the same passage is quoted as I-mu-da-mu dumu-nita en.

*?Ir$_3$-am$_6$-da-mu: [75.2331 = A XX 19] obv.XI:17. However, note that [75.2331 = A XX 19], rev.XI:13-XII:3, is not a list of royal sons. Although Ḫa-ba and Šu-ra-da-mu appear at obv.XI:14-15, the other individuals mentioned are: I-ri$_2$-ik-da-mu (Yibriyum's son), Ir$_3$-am$_6$-da-mu (lugal and judge), In-ma-lik (Yibriyum's son), GABA*-da-mu* (lugal), [Ir$_3$]-i$_3$-ba (lugal), Iš$_{11}$-ga-<ba->ir$_3$ (lugal), U$_3$-ti (lugal and Yibriyum's son), Na-zu-mu (?). The only other mention of Ir$_3$-am$_6$-da-mu as a royal son is still unpublished ([75.1946]). Another man named Ir$_3$-am$_6$-da-mu, a judge (di-ku$_5$), appears frequently in the administrative record.

*?Iš$_{(11)}$-maḫ-da-mu: [75.1780 = A XX 18] obv.IX:2. The other two mentions of Iš$_{(11)}$-maḫ-da-mu as a royal son are still unpublished ([75.1060] and [75.10273]).

Uš-ra*$_{(2)}$-sa$_2$-mu: of the nineteen men appearing in [75.10170], six are never pointed out elsewhere as royal sons (A-zi, Bu$_3$-da-ma-lik, Ib-du-lu, Il$_2$-zi, ^{dingir}KU-ra-ma-i-da, and Uš-ra-sa$_2$-mu). More than one individual named Uš-ra-sa$_2$-mu existed during the age of the Archives: one is attested as a collector (ur$_4$; see Cianfanelli 2020), one as a 'priest' (lu$_2$ dingir-dingir-dingir; see Catagnoti and Fronzaroli 2010, 98), one as a military commander (aga-us$_2$; see Bonechi 2016i). The identities of the other five remain unknown.

Za-a-da-mu: [75.1337 = A XIX 13] rev.VI:7. Za-a-da-mu is probably a different spelling for Šu-ra-da-mu (Samir 2019, 204).

Zu$_{(2)}$-du: [75.1731+75.2498 = A XX 7 = M 7 35] obv.V:6. [75.2538] has been mistakenly quoted as [75.2358]. He also appears in [75.4161 = A XII 49] obv$^{?}$II':3.

Royal sons: Complete lists

Pomponio published one new list of dumu-nita en ([75.1535 = A XV 26] obv.VIII:9-14; Pomponio 2008, xx). However, note that the proper names appearing in lists [75.1862 = A XV 36] rev.IX:1'-9', [75.1843 = A XV 38] rev.IV:5-15, [75.2246 = A XV 49] obv.XIII:8-17, and [75.10276 = A XV 59] obv.IX:1-11 are, at least in part, female (see for example Archi, Catagnoti and Fronzaroli 2008– , G, s.v. Ga-du-wa-du).

[75.2327+75.4203 = A XX 24] obv.VI:8-22 is a list of individuals who probably participated in Keš$_2$-du-ut's wedding, but not all the names on this list belong to royal sons. Similarly, [75.2331 = A XX 19] obv.XI:13-XII:3, lists several high representatives (abba$_2$) of whom at least two were royal sons (see above sub *$^{?}$Ir$_3$-am$_6$-da-mu). 28) An unrecognized occurrence of mè, "battle", in an Ebla Palace G administrative text — The attestations of the Sumerogram mè, "battle", in the cuneiform texts found in the Palace G of Ebla (late 24th century BC) are remarkably few. To those already known, that in TM.75.G.1714 = MEE 7 31, rev. I:2-II:2, must be added: TAR lá-2 <GÍN.DILMUN> kù-sig$_{17}$ / 1 ma-na TAR <GÍN.DILMUN> nagga / mu-DU / NI-sa-ba$_4$ / in ud // mè[1)] / Gú-ra-ra-bal^{ki}. According to this record, 28 shekels of gold and 90 shekels of tin were the income of NI-sa-ba$_4$ (a man from Gáb-lu$_5$-ul^{ki}) "on the occasion of the battle of Gú-ra-ra-bal^{ki}". Interestingly, in rev. II:5-V:3 TM.75.G.1714 = MEE 7 31 also informs us that this event happened in the same year as the death of an Ebla king (surely Yirkab-damu) and his wife, the Ebla queen. I will fully discuss these crucial records (together with those in TM.75.G.2165 = ARET XV 47 and related texts) in a forthcoming article.

Note

1. In F. D'Agostino, Testi amministrativi di Ebla. Archivio L.2769, Materiali Epigrafici di Ebla 7, Roma, 1996, p. 152, this sign, clearly visible in the photograph of MEE 7, Tav. XIV, was read nam-tar$^{?}$ ("decisione del destino$^{?}$"). Rightly, doubts on such reading were already put forward in A. Catagnoti, Sul lessico dei giuramenti a Ebla: nam-ku$_5$, in P. Fronzaroli ed., Miscellanea Eblaitica 4, Quaderni di Semitistica 19, Firenze, 1997, p. 126 n. 55.
